HOPE.

Hope! smiling guardian of my earliest years,
Oft hast thou led me with thy syren song
The thorny paths of life among,
And ne'er forsak me in the vale of tears;
Still pointing, with thy fascinating pow'r,
To brighter scenes, and to a happier hour.

When ruthless penury my youth has chil'd,
And one dull cloud envelop'd all my thought,
His thousand avenues I should have sought,
Hast thy sweet voice my ear no longer fill'd?
But—bright Enchantress! thou couldst e'er prevail.

And all my woes have vanish'd at thy tale,
Thy magic pow'r, then, lovely Goddess! keep;
And, when I droop with the world's varied ill,
Do thou indulge me with thy transports still—
And still beguile me on—till death's sad sleep,
So shall this breast its portion yet support,
And thy dear presence never cease to court.

The Dirge of Wallace.

BY CAMPBELL.

They lighted a taper at the dead of the night,
And chanted their holiest hymn;
But her brow and her bosom were damp with affright;
Her eyes was all sleepless and dim!
And the lady of Ellersie wept for her lord,
When a death-watch beat in her lonely room,
When her curtain had shook of its own accord,
And the raven had flapp'd at her window board,
To tell of her warrior's doom!

Now sing you the death-song, and loudly pray
For the soul of a knight so dear;
And call me a widow this wretched day;
Since the warning of God is here!

For night-mare rides on my strangled sleep;
The lord of my bosom is doom'd to die,
His valorous heart they have wounded deep,
And the blood-tears shall his country weep,
For Wallace of Ellersie!

Yet knew not his country that ominous hour,
Ere the loud matin bell was rung,
That a trumpet of death on an English tower,
Had the dirge of a champion sung!
When his dungeon-light looked dim and red
On the high-born blood of a martyr slain,
No anthem was sung at his holy death-bed;
No weeping was there when his spirit fled,
And his heart was rest in twain!

Oh! it was not thus, when oaken spear
Was true to that knight forlorn;
And hosts of a thousand were scattered like deer,
At the blast of the hunter's horn;
When he strade on the wreck of each well-fought field,
With the yellow-hair'd chief of his native land;
For his lance was not shiver'd on helmet nor shield,
And the sword that seem'd fit for archangel to wield,
Was light in his terrible hand!

Yet bleeding and bound, tho' her Wallace might
For his long-lov'd country die,
The bugle ne'er sung to a braver knight
Than Wallace of Ellersie!
But the day of his glory shall never depart,
From his head uncombt'd shall with glory be balm'd,
From its blood-streaming altar his spirit shall start,
Tho' the raven has fed on his moulder'd heart,
A nobler was never embalm'd!

From Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine.

THE MARBLE HEART.

When Love's first blush came o'er my heart,
'Twas when thy beauty seiz'd it;
Nor hath it let that blush depart,
Although thy coldness freez'd it.

Thou stood'st before my wondering eyes,
A shape of magic lightness,
And, in my midnight dreams, didst rise
Array'd in fairy brightness.

But cold, cold, cold—the marble stone
Not snowier and not colder;
A glory to be gaz'd upon,
That child! the charm'd beholder.

Against thy charms 'tis vain to war,
'Tis vain to try resistance,
The kneelers in thy temple are
All kept at holy distance.

But know—for bards may speak the truth—
And list the voice of reason,
Through fair the rosebud be of youth,
'Tis only for a season.

The chilling winds of winter hast,
O'er time's rough ocean, either;
And like the weeds upon the waste,
The fairest rose must wither.

Urban Chevreux, a French historian, tells us, "When I was young, I remember attending a sermon, preached by a prelate, who was celebrated at court for the greatness of his talent. It was on the fact of Mary Magdalene. The bishop, having enlarged much upon the repentance of Mary, observed, that her tears had opened to her the way to heaven; and that she had travelled by water to a place, where few other persons had gone by land."

Moral and Religious.

TO-MORROW.

To-morrow, that idol deity in which the world have agreed to place their trust, to-morrow that half spun thread on which is hung the weighty concernment of eternity. What is to-morrow? No part of our possession, no part of our inheritance; it is a part in the great chain of duration; but perhaps no part of our present being. Clear and bright, and steady, as it shines to-day, some sudden blast may blow out the lamp of life; and to-morrow may have conveyed us into other company, and settle us into other scenes. Bost not of to-morrow till you have unrolled the book of fate and learnt what to-day shall bring forth. Last night, it is probable, many a gay youth threw himself on the bed whence he shall rise no more, and many a busy head reposed itself upon the pillow, where it shall sleep now and take its rest. How sad and serious are many now, who but last night, were giddy, thoughtless, presumptuous and vain: how terrible has this to-morrow proved to many, who but yesterday said unto themselves that it was yet soon enough to repent. Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee! was a severe, yet gracious warning. In every breeze that blows there is a flight of human fate; in every breath we drink in the deadly poison; every hour we stand in jeopardy; then every man in his best estate is altogether vanity. In every walk we take death treads upon our steps, he watches us in our retirements, he follows us in our business: he mingles with the angels that stand round our bodies: in that very moment when we are least apprehensive of our fate, then the tyrant springs upon his prey, rejoicing to add to his native horrors the necessary terror of surprise. In the midnights of life we are in danger of some fatal blight: in the highest health we may be nearest some mortal malady. What then is life? Is it not a fleeting cloud, an evaporating smoke, an exploding meteor, a painted bubble? Break, the bubble must—in its greatest beauty it will break ere night.

To DIE!—Ah, solemn scene! yet sure nature recoils at the gloomy thought and faint would pass it over. The tyrant may forget the object of his revenge, the parent her smiling offspring and man his God, but death remembers man must die. Our lot remains unchanged—our doom fixed.—Earthly splendour has no exemption from his afts: youth and beauty must obey his mandates. To-day in health, to-morrow "food for worms." The tender ties of earth cannot prolong our stay: the tear of paternal fondness, conjugal affection, avail not, the tide of life spent, we must depart to worlds unknown. The pillow of disease is the moment of reflection:—we then cast a retrospective eye on time past in improbabilities: we bid them not welcome: the intruders fix on our minds, and torture our departing spirits.

View this picture, ye giddy triflers: ye fashionable libertines, cease to mock Omnipotence. In the last dread conflict, friends may wish in vain; nature's struggle's lost: Death is conqueror still—reflect—reform.

SCRAP OF BIOGRAPHY.

C. was born in New England. His relations were among the most respectable people in that country. At a suitable age he became an apprentice to a mechanical employment in Albany, and faithfully served out his minority. Perhaps it was the watchfulness of his master, rather than any virtue of his disposition, which governed C. in this case—for, free from the restraint of authority, he soon showed that his natural propensities were highly depraved. C. longed to make a figure in the world, and hailed his escape from servitude as the happy period which was to usher him into a new state of existence. In a week afterwards he was at Utica, where his artful manners recommended him into any society he chose. He became a politician, and harangued the multitude on all occasions—he caught a military spirit, and succeeded in raising an independent company, of which he was chosen lieutenant.—Nor was he devoid of the usual gallantries of his sex. After declaiming a few hours in the field of Mars, he would occasionally debouch into the groves of Venus, and spend the remainder of the night in wenching.—He had cunning enough, however, to conceal his foibles, and succeeded in ingratiating himself into the good graces of a respectable tradesman, whom he afterwards ruined. This tradesman entrusted him with goods to a large amount, with an understanding that he should open a store on the borders of Lake Ontario. Here C. gave loose to his desires. The receipts of the store simply furnished him with spending money, and nothing was withheld that could contribute to his gratifications. At a fourth of July dinner, he showed his agility by springing on the tables and trampling the dishes and glasses to atoms. This was a hundred dollar frolic, which he promptly cancelled the next day by paying the money. His fame reached the ears of his partner, who speedily dissolved the concern, and gave C. an opportunity of seeking adventures in another quarter. Unwilling to discharge the claims against him, and being threatened with prosecutions, he assumed the garb of a midshipman, and forged a warrant from the secretary of the navy. Thus, with a dirk at his side and cockade in his hat, he passed by sheriffs with impunity. Returning to Utica, he met with the man he had ruined, and spit in his face to show his contempt of him and prove his valour. From here he went to the metropolis of the state, where we lost sight of him.

A year or two afterwards, war having, in the mean time been declared, C. was a volunteer at the battle of Sackett's-Harbour, where he received a wound in the shoulder. His intercourse with the army naturally introduced him to men of the lowest class, with whom he soon became a free companion. After his discharge, he was seen to loiter in tippling shops, instead of flourishing in coffee-houses, and was not scrupulous of demanding a treat from an old acquaintance, and threatening to flog him in case of non-compliance.

Here we again lost sight of him, and continued ignorant of his adventures until we saw him in the metropolis of the union. He was meanly clad, his eyes haggard, his countenance bloated, and he seemed just recovering from a state of deep inebriation. He was also penniless. His genius, however, had not forsaken him—and making a short excursion into the country, he returned in a genteel suit, which he had probably purloined from a fellow lodger at a tavern.

A year or two afterwards, he was in one of our commercial cities, where he presented himself to a charitable mechanics' society, with a false declaration of his being of the same occupation, and of having just been liberated from Dartmoor prison. The members listened with credulous simplicity to the fictitious narrative of his sufferings, and voted him a sum sufficient to defray his expenses to Albany, whether he proposed returning to his friends. The next morning he was seen lying on one of the wharves, dead drunk, with no clothing but a pair of ragged trowsers, through the rents of which his ulcers excited the compassion of every bystander. What naturally suggested itself to all was instantly adopted—a cart was procured, in which he was placed, and conveyed to the almshouse. Such was the fate of C.

MORAL.

Though vice may flourish for a season, it must in the end make full retribution.

The Wild Rose of the Valley.

A FALE.

The evening air blew chilling cold: Dorothy threw her apron over her shoulders and went to the wood-house for faggots. Ellen was left alone; her eye fell on the stump of the withered rose tree: "That was Edward's gift," said she, mournfully, "We will work the harder," said Dorothy: "We knit and spin and have a thousand ways of getting a penny; and when you get strong and healthy, you shall work." "Edward work!" exclaimed the indignant Ellen. "And why not, my child?" rejoined Dorothy. "Is there any disgrace in honest industry? Edward is not proud; and when with some juice of simples, which you, Ellen, shall gather, we have bathed his eyes, who knows but, by the favour of Heaven, his sight may be restored? Thus, Ellen, he will assist our labours, see our cheerful endeavours to make him forget all past misfortunes; and we shall be the happiest family in the village." "Excellent creature!" cried Edward, "my whole life shall pass in active gratitude. But I must away: on the brow of the hill I left a weary traveller; I will bring him to taste a cup of your beer, and speed him on his journey." Ellen was unwilling that he should leave her so soon, though but for a few minutes; but when Edward continued absent above two hours, her terror was insuperable! The night closed in, and Edward did not return. Ellen's couch was covered with tears, and morning found her pale and sad. She waited at the door in anxious expectation, and with a scream of wild joy exclaimed, "he is coming!" He was supported by an elderly man; and Ellen hastened forward to lend her assistance also, while Dorothy prepared their homely breakfast. Edward seemed breathless with fatigue; and the stranger accounted for the delay, by saying that he had wandered up the country, leaving his companion had forgotten him. "Ah! you are cold and wet!" said Ellen. "No, my love; you see I have a great coat. I found my little parcel at the house where I rested last night." "And that house, which was once your own cruel father's, should now be yours," said Ellen. "But no; he was not cruel, Edward; for he has given you to us." "Come, come; this is fine talking," cried Dorothy, "while the poor youth is cold and hungry; and see the tears how they roll down his cheeks." "Do your eyes pain you, Edward?" enquired Ellen: "let me wash them with spring water." "They do, indeed," said he. In the gentlest manner possible, Ellen removed the bandage; and his full, expressive, hazel eye met hers, beaming joy and love. She receded with a scream of surprise. He threw off his coat, and discovered his dress decorated with every military honour. "Ellen forgive this deception; it was my father's stratagem; and here he is a witness to your

to which he had been exposed: for Edward, it was, and love soon revealed him to the wonder-struck Ellen. In a moment both of his hands were seized by Dorothy, and her child; who forgot the first joy at sight of him, the second, the sorrows of his appearance, led him to the cot; but "enquiry" was still suspended; and Ellen fixed her eyes on the withered rose-tree, in anguish. "Ah! alas, he cannot see it now," she began his disinterested affection. I am not dishonored, but promoted, by my noble commander to high military rank." "It is true, indeed," said the old gentleman, "I suspected my son of an unworthy choice, and dictated this stratagem as the means of confirmation. Miss Lyndall despised a poor infirm soldier, and now my Edward has to sue you for your acceptance." Dumb gratitude seized the trembling Ellen: she fell at the feet of Dr. Hamilton, bathed his hands with her tears, and vainly tried to express the feelings of her oppressed heart. The rustic meal passed some time unregarded, till composure was restored, and the benevolence of the intention rendered it a repast palatable even to Dr. Hamilton. "Your rose-tree is withered," said Ellen. "Indeed I could not preserve it." "Held it not," returned Edward: "it was a hot-house plant, and could ill endure the slightest breeze of mischance. You, Ellen, are the blooming Wild Rose of the Valley, whose native sweetness is but increased by the homeliness of the culture it received. Oh, let me then transplant thee into a richer soil, And of my garden be the pride and joy."

Ellen, with blushing joy, gave her hand to her lover, who that day led her to the mansion house, where the delighted inhabitants of the village came to make their heart-felt gratulations; and, in the happiness of his children, Dr. Hamilton found his cure; and the aged Dorothy sunk into a peaceful grave, beloved and revered by her dutiful child; and to the arms of Dr. Hamilton, is now added with proud triumph, the blooming Wild Rose of the Valley.

Bank of the United States.

In a late judicial decision it appears to be the opinion of Judge Washington, that the Bank of the United States, in certain cases, has no right to refuse the payment of notes cut in two, though both parts should not be produced. "Cutting a bank note into two parts (says the Judge) does not discharge the Bank from the debt of which the note was but the evidence; nor does it even impair the evidence itself, if, by uniting the parts, the contents of the entire note can be made out. If one of the parts should be lost or destroyed, the debt would be no more affected, than if the entire note had been lost or destroyed. The evidence is impaired indeed, not by the act of cutting the note, but by the same accident which would have affected the entire note had that been lost. In both cases the owner must resort to secondary evidence, and is bound to prove that the note did once exist, that it is lost or destroyed, and that he is the true and sole owner of the debt. If one part only of the note has to encounter, in proving his right to the debt, is diminished."

The Secretary of the Treasury reports to the House of Representatives, in answer to Mr. Darlington's call for information, that no money arising from militia fines, in the state of Pennsylvania, has been paid into the Treasury of the United States. Connecting this fact with the information derived from common reports, that something like two hundred thousand dollars were to be collected in this way, it is one of no little interest. Mr. Smith, the late Marshal, it appears, never paid any money over on this account to Mr. Conard, the present Marshal, nor gave him any definite information on the subject. It further appears that the Deputies of the late Marshal had generally refused to pay over to the present Marshal the balance in their hands, and it also appears, from papers delivered over by Mr. Smith, and from information derived from other sources, that Lewis Delbeck, one of Mr. Smith's Deputies in Bucks county, had a balance in his hands of $3,545 60, and that similar abuses had been committed by other Deputies of Mr. Smith, but to what extent cannot be definitely ascertained. Here is an "Auricular stink" indeed! [National Intelligencer.]

CONGRESS.

The Evening Post.

PHILADELPHIA.

Saturday, January 26, 1823.

No event has transpired in this city, within our recollection, calculated to excite more general sympathy than the destruction of the Orphan Asylum, and its attending deplorable calamity. What mind can dwell on the awful catastrophe, and not shudder—the heart sickens at the bare recital. In the dead hour of night—a freezing night it was—upwards of one hundred orphan children lay slumbering in this hospitable mansion, the pride of the munificent ladies of Philadelphia—when suddenly the devouring element burst forth, and enveloped the whole in flames!—Here we might pause, for our feeble efforts cannot depict the scene which ensued. Every parent will commiserate the condition of the little inmates of this charitable institution—and the untimely fate of twenty-three innocent victims, who were consumed before the assistance which was offered could reach them, will long be remembered.—

Not a vestige of the beautiful edifice, which was the Orphan Asylum, remains but cracked and tottering walls—all that was under the roof, of a combustible nature, has been utterly destroyed! The fire commenced about half past two on Wednesday night—it originated from some clothes which had been placed by the fire to dry. A meeting of the citizens took place yesterday, and measures have been concerted to relieve the sufferers. Three thousand dollars were immediately subscribed, and committees appointed to collect donations in the different wards.—

A bill to establish a Loan Office was reported in the House of Representatives, on Tuesday last. [Harrisburg Chronicle.]

PUNCTUAL ATTENDANCE IN CONGRESS. The Senate, composed of forty-eight members, representing twenty-four states, are all, with the exception of C. A. Rodney, from Delaware, (who has not yet taken his seat,) in attendance on their legislative functions.

The House of Representatives, consisting of 187 members and two delegates, representing twenty-four states and two territories, are all, with the exception of three absentees, viz: Gideon Tomlinson, of Connecticut, (on leave;) Louis McLane, of Delaware (indisposed;) and Henry H. Ryan of Tennessee, his seat not taken this Congress, in the daily transaction of their legislative duties.

There are, at present, two vacancies in this body, viz: one in the New-York delegation, occasioned by the resignation of Solomon Van Rensselaer; and another in Delaware, by the recent election of C. A. Rodney to the Senate. [Wash. Gaz.]

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

WALKUT STREET THEATRE. The historical and patriotic Melo-Drama, called YUKE CARMELLI, or the siege of Tripoli, was represented yesterday evening. This play is from the pen of Mr. Noah, of New-York. That gentleman was for several years a Consul at one of the Barbary ports, whence however he was recalled by this government on the account of his religion. Being of a keen penetrating mind, and a close observer of men and things—it is not wonderful that he should have produced a just delineation of the manners and habits of the Tripolitans, and of their fluctuating demeanour towards their countrymen. We are pleased that Mr. Noah's last drama of Marius is announced to be in a state of forward preparation at the same theatre.

Owing to the late repeated night robberies, the Mayor has suspended the duty of the Watch, of calling the hour. We hope this salutary measure will have its desired effect.

MILITIA FINES.

It appears by a statement laid before Congress, that John Smith, late Marshal of this state, by his own account, paid into the Treasury of the United States, $2,742 42 more than he has received for militia dues during the last war. John Conard, the present marshal, says he has collected $3,671 50 cents, and paid in expense of collecting the same, $3,590 56.

U. S. SHIP WASP.

The survivors, heirs, and legal representatives of the officers and crew of the late ship Wasp, capt. Blinckley, are notified in the National Intelligencer, that their claims will be settled on application to the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a certificate, signed by a Judge of some Court of Record, in the state or territory where they reside, authenticating their right to the same.

The papers from the north and south have been extremely barren for this week past. This, no doubt, is produced by the interference of Jack Frost, who spares neither age, sex, nor condition—it is more than likely, if he troubles our neighbours as much as he does us, his welcome must be quite worn out. When a thaw once takes place the columns of the public prints may be inundated by the sweeping mass of intelligible matter which now remains concealed in the atmosphere.

A few nights ago, the attention of some gentlemen who had met on business in the Washington Hall, was arrested by the crash of a pane of glass in one of the upper windows. A dog who accompanied them up stairs picked up a ball, which on examination was found to be composed of combustible matter, which had been set on fire, but had been quenched by some accident, too soon to answer the purposes of the incendiary. It was thrown into the Hall, from Lingham's Court.

WEEKLY SUMMARY.

Last week, as the convulsions from the pentimento at New-York, were clearing over the land, they found the earth, water, fire, and human of a cataclysm, that were shaken from the Catholic Cathedral, about 12 months since.

Thompson, who murdered Miss Hamilton some time since, died on Sunday morning last, in the Baltimore county goal. Verdict of the jury, that he came to his death from the visitation of God.

MUTINY.—Four seamen concerned in the mutiny on board the ship-ketch, of London, Capt. Purdie, have been hung at Barbados. On the trial, Kidd, the greatest villain of the set, was admitted as king's evidence. The facts relating to this case were these—they took forcible possession of the ship, and having bound the captain, put him, his wife, their two children, a servant, and a passenger, into a small gig boat, with only ten biscuits and two cans. These unhappy victims have not been heard of, and there is little doubt that they have perished.

ROBBERS.—On Monday night, Mr. Dulle's dwelling, in Washington square, was entered by means of boring through the kitchen door. The villains carried off most of the valuable kitchen furniture. Savage & Dugan's counting-house, in Tork court, on the same night, was robbed of several Leghorn-knots—from the trunks on the floor it happened a dog had accompanied the thieves.

INFANTICIDE.—A new born infant perfectly naked, with its scull fractured, was found exposed at the French fun-yards, New-York, last week.

An elegant silver vase, manufactured in this city, has been sent to Charlotte, S. C. as a prize to the fleetest horse at the races in February.

William Crook, a native of England, was found dead in his bed near Hounslow, H. J. on the 13th.

timated at 32,708 enrolled, including officers of every grade—increased since last year, 4,388.

A gang of counterfeiters have lately been arrested in Pittsburg, Penn.

The receipts into the treasury of the state of Maine, for the past year, amounted to $107,482.

31 cents.

The small pox, it is feared, will prove fatal to many persons in Tarborough, N. C. owing to the use of matter not genuine, which had been forwarded to Dr. Ward by Dr. Smith, the United States' Agent for vaccination.

Considerable sums of money have been obtained at Savannah, and Charleston, (S. C.) by forged checks, purporting to be drawn by the Bank of the U. States on the branches in those cities. Three of the counterfeiters have been arrested.

Accounts from New-Orleans mention that there had been slighting in that city about three weeks ago.

Gen. San Martin assumed the supreme command in Peru, by a decree of the 3d of August, in which he declares himself Proteor!

A school was established about a year since at Buenos Ayres upon the Lancasterian system, and a society formed for the extension of education among the lower orders.

A Lancaster School was opened at White

Video, in the beginning of Nov., by Don John de Codina, formerly in the U. States.

In consequence of the great scarcity of cattle,

the government of Buenos Ayres issued a decree

Aug 21, prohibiting the killing of cows.

The New-Orleans paper of the last week in Deember, mentions two persons who had perished

by cold in the streets of that city.

The number of deaths in Portsmouth, (N. H.)

in 1821, were 169—among the number 23 of measles—23 of consumption—20 of fevers—and 30 of old age.

A great Painting.—Mr. Samuel F. B. Morse, a distinguished artist, has in hand a splendid painting of the interior of the Representative Chamber at Washington, at the time of candle light, when the members are assembled for an evening sitting;

the picture will contain upwards of one hundred different portraits and figures, and the whole will be on canvas 11 feet by 7 feet 6 inches.

In the state of Maryland, it appears that there are no fewer than two hundred and twenty-five

Justices of the Peace.

Letters received at Washington, announce that a great Battle has been fought, in the Arkansas country, between the Cherokees and Osages, in which the former were entirely victorious, making prisoners of several hundred of their antagonists.

The spacious lot on Broad street, between Chas-nut and Walnut, known as Vauxhall Gardens, has been purchased by a Board of Trustees, for the purpose of being converted into a Monastery for Monks and Nuns.

On Sunday night last, the store of John and Wm.

Tonkin, at Carpenter's Landing, N. J. was robbed of goods to the amount of $300. One of the robbers having taken some Antimonial Wine in mistake, they were traced to a neighbouring woods, where they had deposited the goods, which were recovered, and the thieves thus fortunately detected. They are now in goal.

Mr. Turner's Cabinet maker's shop, at the Cross roads, four miles below Woodbury, N. J. was destroyed by fire on the 18th inst. with a considerable stock of furniture, besides an adjoining wheel-barrow shop.

Fulton Market, at New-York, on Tuesday morning last, with a fine display of meats.

Mr. Clay, the late speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed through Washington city, a few days ago, on his way to Virginia, being charged with a mission from the state of Kentucky, relating to the mutual interests of the two states.

A negro of Virginia, being last week entrusted with a load of hay to take to market, while on his way, feeling suddenly the propriety of enthrallment, without any advice, he left the wagon, team, and hay in the road, and made off; nor has he since been heard of.

Mr. Cooper is on a tour to the southward.

Four attempts have been made within a few months, to set fire to the dwelling house of Capt. William Bell, of Winchester, Va.

Freshet.—The Cahawba (Alab.) Press

states, that the quantity of rain which fell there in a given time, on the 28th of Dec.

and the night of the 29th was unprecedented.

The Alabama and Cahawba rivers rose forty feet!!

LOSS OF THE BARQUE PACKET.

The following particulars of the loss of the barque Packet, Capt. Fiske, of New-York, and the melancholy fate of the crew, was furnished by Mr. George Ramsay, the only survivor, in a letter to the owners:

"Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavor."

EPIPHANY ON A GLUTTON.
Bould thy teeth speak they'd thank thee o'er and o'er,
They know a rest they never knew before.

A lady being in company with a large party, the conversation turned upon the time at which a female is forbid to tell her age, she applied to a gentleman who had sat without speaking for some time, with a "Pray Mr. Justice Silence when I am asked what is my age, what answer shall I give?" "Say, madam," replied he, "what I believe will be the truth—that you are not yet come to years of discretion."

Mr. Garrow, examining a witness, asked him what his business was: he answered, "A dealer in old iron." "Then said the Counsel, "you must of course be a thief?" "I don't see," replied the witness, "why a dealer in iron must necessarily be a thief, more than a dealer in brass."

A barrister, in the Court of King's Bench, describing the bad usage of a high-bred horse, said that the animal had for some time been employed in dragging heavy loads, and fed on coarse old hay till the animal himself had demurred to the treatment; "he should not have demurred (replied Mr. Erskine,) now the winter season is over; he had better have put himself on the country."

"What will you leave me in your will?" asked the lady of an Irishman, "The wide world?" he replied.

An honest tar hired a horse to carry him a few miles, but before he had got many yards, he found he possessed the usual excellencies of the fourfooted hirelings of the roads, such as blindness, lameness, stumbling, &c. The sailor, however, (having been unshipped twice with very little ceremony in the length of half a mile, by the creature falling on its knees) hit upon a very whimsical mode of curing the impediment, which was by tying a large stone to his tail, and in that state rode several miles, swearing, "shiver his timbers, but it was the only thing to prevent the ship's going too much ahead."

In the early part of the reign of George II, the footman of a lady of quality, under the absurd induction of a dream, disposed of the savings of the last twenty years of his life in two lottery tickets, which proved blanks; after a few days he put an end to his life. In his box was found the following plan of the manner in which he would spend the 5000⁰ prize, which his mistress preserved as a curiosity:—As soon as I have received the money, I will marry Grace Towers, but as she has been cross and coy, I will use her as a servant. Every morning she shall get me a mug of strong beer, with a toast, nutmeg, and sugar in it; then I will sleep till ten, after which I will have a sack posset. My dinner shall be on table by one, and never without a good pudding; I will have a stock of wine and brandy laid in. About five in the afternoon I will have tarts and jellies, and a gallon bowl of punch; at ten a hot supper of two dishes. If I am in a good humour, and Grace behaves herself, she shall sit down with me. To bed about twelve."

A Modern Amazon.

A robbery of a novel cast recently took place in the county of Emanuel, state of Georgia. A certain physician, who is infirm and old, had been attending on the daughter of a Mr. and Mrs. Gregory. After the recovery of the patient, the father paid the Doctor for his professional services, the sum of forty-five dollars, which, with other collections he had made about the same time, amounted to 70 or $80. While on his way home, and passing by a swamp, this infirm and aged son of Esculapius was accosted by a fox clad in no ordinary terror. It was no less than Mrs. Gregory, the mother of his late patient, as the Doctor has since declared, under the solemnity of an oath before a civil tribunal, habited in the attire of a warrior, her face well blacked, a musket upon her shoulder, and two or three pieces of pipe stems thrust out of her mouth. She advanced with the impetuosity of Joan of Arc, seized his bridle rein with one hand, and with the other laid hold of the pocket which contained the money, and never relaxed her grasp till she tore away the pocket and secured its contents. Mrs. G. is now in the county goal waiting the return of the Superior Court for her trial. A disgraceful transaction took place in an attempt to bail her out a short time after her apprehension. The justices of the inferior Court refused to accept of the securities which were offered for her appearance at court, when Gregory and an unprincipled band attached to his interest, seized one of the judges as he was about to return home, dragged him from his horse, dislocated his hip, and left him dead upon the ground. This gentleman, has ever since been confined to bed at the court house, unable to return to his family.
